Topic: Mahjong

Wiki page: https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Mahjong

For my microsite, I want to create an approachable introduction to the game of mahjong. The website will explore the history, tiles, and rules of the game, along with the many ways it is played around the world. The goal is to help visitors understand what mahjong is, why it has lasted for generations, and what makes each tile and variation unique.

5 website pages:

1. Home: A brief introduction to mahjong as a tile-based game for two to four players that began in 19th-century China, including the story behind its original name, "sparrow," and a few quick facts.

2. History: A timeline of how mahjong developed from Chinese card games into a tile game.

3. The Tiles: An overview of the 144-tile set, including the three suits (dots, bamboo, and characters), the honor tiles (winds and dragons), and the bonus tiles (flowers and seasons).

4. How to Play: A step-by-step explanation of the basics, including seating and winds, building the wall and dealing, drawing and discarding, forming sets (pungs, kongs, chows, and the pair), and what makes a winning hand.

5. Mahjong Around the World: A look at regional variations such as Hong Kong, Japanese (riichi), and American mahjong, along with the game's place in culture, from manga and film to tournaments, superstitions, and its use in memory research.

I want the website to feel bold and playful, using illustrated tiles, and visual comparisons to show how the game works. I especially want to explore how the design of the tiles can be translated to the screen. The website should feel more like a visual guide to the game than a rulebook.
